2022 Kentucky National Wildlife Art Exhibit

Juror: Marie McGhee

Marie McGhee is the Arizona Sonora Desert Museum's Director of the Art Institute, whose mission is "Conservation through Art Education." In Marie's role at the museum, she oversees the management of the traveling permanent art collection, the curation of eight or more shows per year in the Art Institute's two galleries, and the delivery of over 200 art classes. Her goal is to ensure that the Art Institute provides a high quality and readily accessible visual arts experience which helps the community better understand not only the importance of conservation but also the role they can play in it. Marie has almost two decades of experience in leading lifelong learning programs, including oversight of programs at the University of New Mexico's Division of Continuing Education. In her spare time, Marie enjoys hiking, birding, and photography.

2022 Kentucky National Wildlife Art Exhibition

Presented by Ohio Valley Art League and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

Reason & Purpose

Henderson, Ky., home of John James Audubon will again host the 14th biennial Kentucky National Wildlife Art Exhibit. John James Audubon lived and painted in Henderson from 1810-1819, it is here that he set the course toward painting every bird in North America. The purpose is to increase awareness for the preservation of wildlife and to recognize artists who derive inspiration and imagery from wildlife and environment. The exhibit further encourages the collection of original works of art.
